The value of the underlying funds and the income generated from them can go down as well as up, and is not guaranteed. Investors may not get back the original amount invested. The value of investments involving exposure to foreign currencies can be affected by currency exchange rate fluctuations. Past performance is not a guide to future performance.

Monthly commentary

- Markets continued their strong run into the end of May, challenging the old "sell in May" adage as equities delivered another standout month. Risk appetite remained firmly intact, supported by buoyant IPO activity and ongoing enthusiasm for AI and technology. This strength persisted despite a difficult geopolitical and macro backdrop, including continued tensions in the Strait of Hormuz, the protracted war in Ukraine, and renewed global health concerns with outbreaks of hantavirus and Ebola. While these developments underscore persistent uncertainty, markets largely looked through them, with investors instead focused on growth narratives and liquidity.
- Performance across risk assets was notably strong. Global equities rose 5.4% in May, led by technology and growth segments. The Nasdaq gained 9.3%, while growth equities advanced 7.9%. Emerging markets also rallied, up nearly 11%, driven in particular by Korea where the KOSPI surged 27%, supported by exceptional performance in semiconductor names such as SK Hynix. Demand for chip-related assets remains intense, further fuelled by anticipation of major IPOs including SpaceX, with OpenAI and Anthropic soon to follow. This combination has kept markets firmly "risk-on," with strong participation in high-growth themes.
- Elsewhere, the picture was more mixed. Oil prices declined nearly 19% over the month, providing support to equities as expectations for easing geopolitical tensions fluctuated. Bonds struggled, posting mostly negative returns, while high yield credit managed modest gains. Chinese equities lagged their regional peers, remaining out of favour relative to Taiwan and Korea. Gold declined slightly in May and has since seen sharper falls, potentially reflecting profit-taking and capital rotation into equities and upcoming IPOs. Bitcoin also weakened, down 2.5% in May and significantly below its prior October peak.
- We enter June with markets at fresh highs, though leadership remains narrow, increasing the risk of volatility if key stocks falter. With correlations elevated across both developed and emerging markets, diversification remains critical. Traditional hedges such as government bonds are proving less reliable, reinforcing the need for broad, balanced exposure across asset classes and styles.

Important information

Prior to 15.04.2024 the Momentum Passive Plus Cautious Portfolio was known as pi Cautious Portfolio.

Fact sheet geographic allocation percentages are in some cases based on the normalised (or benchmark) asset allocations of investee funds, as opposed to the actual exposures of those funds at the date of the fact sheet. This reflects the expected average allocation over time which will result from decisions to hold particular funds.

Nothing contained herein constitutes investment, legal, tax or other advice nor is it to be solely relied on in making an investment or other decision. If you are considering investing in the Momentum Passive Plus Portfolios ("Portfolios") clients should consult a suitably qualified and approved Financial Adviser. The performance shown represents performance of the Portfolios that are periodically restructured and rebalanced based on the impact of material, economic and market factors that influence MGIM's decision-making on asset allocation. The Portfolios are applied to client accounts by the platform provider but it may take some time for the client accounts to mirror the performance of the Portfolios. It is for this reason that client accounts may not have achieved exactly the same returns as the Portfolios. The performance of the Portfolios is based on the actual performance of the underlying funds included in the portfolios. These performance figures have not been audited by an external body. The value of investments may go down as well as up and the value will depend on fluctuations in financial markets outside MGIM's control, as a result an investor may not get back the amount invested.
